Flat vs Raised vs Routed Panels

Cross-sections of these common panels show you what to expect from each design.

Flat Panel

Each side of pedestal has floating panels. Assembly of 5 separate pieces makes each panel. We only use solid hardwood for the panels not plywood.

Raised Panel

Just like the flat panel, except the center panel is thick solid wood with a "raised" profile. Fancier version of the flat panel. Our most popular panel type.

Routed Panel

Solid wood with a groove cut to simulate a raised panel. Typically cut with a router. Does not have floating panels like traditional cabinetry. We do not offer this type of panel, as they have wood movement issues and have a higher failure rate.

Sick of unknown shipping charges?

In today's economic climate you shouldn't have to gamble your money on unknown shipping costs.

With all of today's technology there is absolutely no reason not to know what your shipping costs are before you place your order. One shipping mistake can make your project over-budget, costing you money.

When looking at an elk pedestal or something similar, some companies might give you a surprise freight bill of $150 or more. But you won't know until you place your order.

If you order $50 or more from us we will take care of all the shipping costs. (Nope, we don't have a handling charge either.) Including freight shipping to a business location on all large pedestals

We even offer free shipping on most custom projects, and if we can't offer free shipping on your custom order, we can tell you what it will cost up front. No guessing games here.
